

Frank O'Toole named President of Gannett Supply Corporation

October 10, 2012

MCLEAN, Va., Oct. 10, 2012 /PRNewswire/ -- Frank O'Toole has been named president of Gannett Supply Corporation, Gannett Chief Financial Officer Victoria Harker announced today. Gannett Supply is responsible for companywide sourcing of all commodities used in publishing, broadcasting and digital services, including services, equipment and supplies.

O'Toole has served as vice president of Gannett Supply since 2010; previously, he also served in a variety of information technology and corporate finance roles within Gannett since 1994. He succeeds Karen Moreno, who is retiring after 32 years of service to Gannett.

"Karen has been a strong contributor to and leader within the company," said Harker. "We wish her the very best in the years to come. Likewise, we are looking forward to Frank's success in his new role, as he leverages his broad industry experience in large-scale, complex purchasing arrangements, combined with information technology and tools, to achieve even greater momentum for Gannett Supply in the future."

O'Toole lives in Oakton, VA, with his wife Lora and five children.
